If I share...we create opportunities

- You want: experiential learning, authentic learning context, multi-level and -disciplinary student teams and projects, needs based, just in time learning , involvement of creative and entrepreneurial professionals etc.

- Problem: creating and managing such a learning environment is labour intensive. Most teachers have no time for this.

So...I started to share!

If I share...we create opportunities

Facilitating change through autonomy and trust

Our community...

- Facilitates student entrepreneurs to meet each other, learn and work together
- Connects entrepreneurial students from vocational schools, universities of applied sciences and academic universities
- Gets students out of the building
- Combines efforts and increase the relevance of activities for students and entrepreneurs
- Increases visibility of EE for companies during events such as Global Entrepreneurship week, Dutch Design Week, Dutch Technology week, European Social Innovation week
- Creates possibilities for needs based, just-in-time learning
- Reduces the workload of teachers by creating a shared learning environment

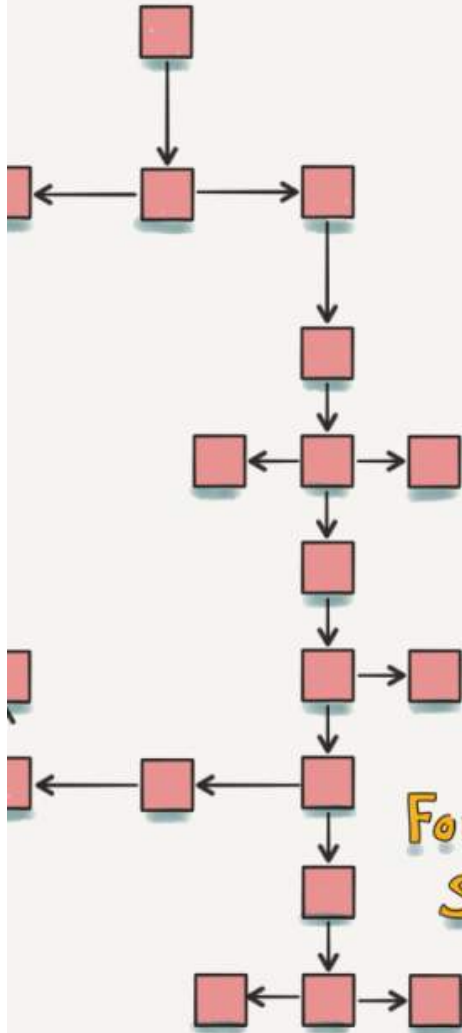

Let's all share!

Social Structure

Do's...

- Start at working level, not management level; identify the problem owners?
- Individual experiences from members of the community can be an inspiration to others.
- Take time to get to know each other, build trust and share your vision and objectives
- Start with what already exists and fits in the daily working profile of persons involved
- Actively involve students
- Invest heavily in community management

Co-creation

is the intentional and yet organic process of bringing together different groups and perspectives to jointly produce a mutually valued outcome.
